The United States supreme court has decided that two subjects of his Britannic majesty, one a war nurse and one an army chaplain during the World war, cannot become citizens of the United States while denying the obligation to defend this country in case of war, against armed enemies, foreign or domestic, by the only means through which such defense can be offered, namely, by arms. The applications for citizenship of these two persons have been elaborately staged, and accompanied by organized publicity, and it appears probable that they have been part of the propaganda by which it is sought to establish a doctrine now being widely preached, that participation in the national defense in case of invasion or insurrection is a matter for the individual "conscience."

The federal and state constitutions lay upon the citizen just one specific obligation, which is that he is a member of the unorganized militia, subject to call in case of insurrection or invasion. It is true that the government does not compel combatant service by genuinely conscientious objectors. To give to every citizen the right, in case the armed enemies of the nation attempt to destroy it, to hide behind the pretense of conscientious disagreement with his country's cause, regardless of the real motive, and in this way reject the necessary obligation all loyal citizens must accept, would be to open the door to paralysis of national defense.

Citizenship is a privilege, not a right, to an alien who seeks it. Since under our laws, every native born citizen is a member of the unorganized militia, subject to call in case of invasion or insurrection, there is no good reason why special privileges should be granted to those who offer to change their allegiance from a foreign power. The alien who undertakes to dictate the terms upon which he will accept the privileges of American citizenship, should be permitted to remain in the full enjoyment of his present national allegiance. We have all too many Americans, both native and foreign born, who are ready to accept the benefits of American citizenship, but are unwilling to perform the duties that go along with it.

There is no danger that the American people are going to enter upon any unjust war—any war of aggression or invasion. We cannot enter upon such a war without the approval of the representatives of the American people in congress assembled, and congress will declare no war except with the approval of the people, which will be more slowly given in the future than at any past time. The assumption in advance by any alien that the American people are going to enter upon wars which the consciences of righteous men cannot approve is an impudent one. Perhaps, as British citizens whose life-time associations have been with the people and the institutions of a foreign power, their consciences might not approve defense of this nation in case of attack by their one-time countrymen. At any rate, there seems to be no good reason for placing aliens in a privileged class as an inducement to have them accept the right to vote and to enjoy the exemptions and opportunities that come with American citizenship.

When war comes, however, there is just one question involved. Under attack, either the American nation and people must be conquered, or it must conquer the enemy. The only question to be determined by individual "conscience" then, is whether arms in the hands of an enemy must prevail, or arms in the hands of the American people. In that case, as a matter of fact, neither the Yale theological professor nor the New York nurse would be compelled to physically fight. They would be expected, however, to fulfill the

Hoover's Plan for War Debt Moratorium Not Wholly Liked by France—Aviators Fly Across Atlantic Ocean.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Walter E. Edge

President Hoover's plan for a one year moratorium on reparations and war debts probably will go through unless France blocks it. Hailed with cheers by most of the world, the proposition was received rather coldly and suspiciously by the French. Ambassador Walter E. Edge got busy with the government leaders in Paris and worked to gain their acceptance of the plan, but the best he could obtain from the cabinet was a note carrying modified approval. This, forwarded through him to Washington, lauded Mr. Hoover's initiative but insisted that Germany must continue payment of the "unconditional" annuities as provided under the Young plan, though France would waive the conditional payments for a year inasmuch as America will waive war debt payments for the same period. The unconditional annuities France is willing to turn back to Germany through the Bank of International Settlements if the money is needed.

Great Britain and Germany had already given the plan their full approval, and Mussolini sent word that Italy accepted it unequivocally. Belgium, which is as jealous of her reparations as France, was expected to follow the French lead.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon arrived in Paris and immediately began conversations at the Quai d'Orsay in the hope of reconciling the plans of Mr. Hoover and of the French cabinet.

The President early was assured of the support of the leaders of both parties and all factions in congress, and during the week he canvassed the entire membership of both houses in order to learn just what position they would take in the matter. The result was not made public but it was presumed he had assurances of far more than enough votes to put over whatever legislation will be necessary.

There is no pretence that Mr. Hoover's plan is wholly altruistic. It is designed to help bring to an end the existing depression by reviving trade and business and if it succeeds in this, the United States would be expected to reap its fair share of the benefits. That the mere putting forward of the proposition was at least temporarily beneficial was shown by the new buoyancy in the stock exchanges.

PROVIDED the proposed reparations and war debt moratorium really turns the business tide toward prosperity, it would be a profitable investment for the United States. Such is the opinion of Ogden L. Mills, undersecretary of the treasury. He asserted in Washington that the loss of about $250,000,000 which this country will not collect next year if the plan goes through would be more than made up in a short time if it brought about a return of better times. "From indications thus far," Mr. Mills said, "it appears that the world at large looks upon the American proposal as a hopeful business factor. Stocks have risen in the big exchanges. With better business the tax receipts of the treasury will decline."

Mr. Mills declined to predict whether it will be necessary to recommend a tax increase to the next congress to supply revenues for operating the government during the next fiscal year. He pointed out, however, that postponement of war debt payments would cut the treasury receipts during the next year by more than $250,000,000. This year's deficit, on the basis of income tax returns, probably will not greatly exceed $850,000,000.

Up to the close of June 19, total expenditures chargeable against ordinary receipts were $4,116,905,000, as compared with an estimated expenditure for the fiscal year of $4,335,000,000.

If business conditions improve treasury officials anticipate an immediate raise in the income tax and other receipts. Commerce department officials said that they were hopeful better financial conditions abroad would be reflected in American foreign commerce.

FIRST of this year's crop of American transatlantic flyers to hop off from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, were Wiley Post and Harold Gatty in the single motored cabin plane Winnie Mae. Their destination was Berlin, and though they did not make the flight to the German capital without stop, they did succeed in getting safely across the ocean. They landed at the Sealand airfield near Chester, England, after circling over the city of Bangor, Wales. Post was the pilot of the plane throughout the flight and Gatty acted as navigator. They were heard from only once on the way across, the liner Drottningholm picking up their radio call.

Post and Gatty set out to make the circuit of the globe in ten days. They remained at Chester only long enough to refuel and eat lunch, and then flew to Berlin and thence onward toward Moscow.

Only a few hours after Post and Gatty hopped off, Otto Hillig and Holger Holris started from Harbor Grace in a big, heavily loaded Bellanca plane with the hope of making a nonstop flight to Copenhagen, Denmark. But they lost their way and landed at Krefeld, Germany.

Ruth Nichols, flying from New York on the first leg of her projected trip across the Atlantic, landed at St. John, N. B., and ran her plane into a rock near the airfield. She was painfully injured and the plane was so badly damaged that it was necessary to postpone her flight indefinitely.

James ("Jimmy") Doolittle, one of America's most daring and most expert flyers, had another narrow escape from death when his new speed plane started falling apart while he was traveling 250 miles an hour only 100 feet up, near St. Louis, Mo. He came down safely in a parachute and the plane was demolished.

Dr. G. Jameson Carr

NEW YORK'S latest death mystery—that of Starr Faithfull beautiful but erratic, whose body was found on the sands of Long Beach—is still unsolved and may remain so. The authorities had hoped the information brought back by Dr. G. Jameson Carr, ship's surgeon of the Cunard line, would reveal how the young woman came to her death. She had admittedly been infatuated with him and on his return from England he gave the grand jury two notes from her in which she told of planning to commit suicide. But Starr's stepfather, Stanley E. Faithfull, took one look at them and declared they were forgeries. Handwriting experts were to be called on to settle this question.

Both letters were addressed to Doctor Carr in care of the medical department of the Cunard line at Liverpool. One, postmarked June 2, and written on stationery of a New York hotel, flatly declared Starr was going to end her "worthless, disorderly bore of an existence—before I ruin any one else's life as well." The second, written two days later from Mineola, was in flippant vein and reiterated her intention to commit suicide.

SIR HUBERT WILKINS and his weary crew managed to get the submarine Nautilus into the harbor of Cork, Ireland, after its stormy voyage across the Atlantic. The commander said that after the batteries were recharged he would proceed to England for other repairs, and that he hoped to reach the North pole, by the sub-ice route, in two months.

The mishaps and delay suffered by the Wilkins expedition led Dr. Hugo Eckener to abandon his plan for a meeting between the Graf Zeppelin and the Nautilus at the pole. The dirigible will make a six-day cruise into Arctic regions in July on a scientific mission.

DWIGHT Davis, governor general of the Philippines, has had enough of that difficult and thankless job and has notified the administration in Washington that he would like to quit as soon as President Hoover can conveniently fill the post. He says merely that he desires to take up again his residence in the United States.

The knowledge spreading through official circles that Mr. Davis has offered his resignation has already produced booms for two men as candidates for his position. They are Theodore Roosevelt, governor of Porto Rico, and Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy. The official expectation is that one of the two will get the post and at present Mr. Roosevelt appears to be in the lead.

WITH due formality President Hoover received William Duncan Herridge, the new minister from the Dominion of Canada. In accepting his official letters of credence Mr. Hoover declared that the establishment of direct diplomatic relations between the United States and Canada had served to strengthen international friendship. Mr. Herridge, who is only the second Canadian minister to the United States, referred to the maintenance of a legation in Washington as an aid to cordial relations.

CHIANG KAI-SHEK, head of the Chinese Nationalist government, has begun his great effort to exterminate the communists and bandits. He concentrated about 200,000 troops in Kiangsi province and held a war council in Nanchang at which the military operations were all planned. If these succeed, he believes it will put an end to resistance, both political and armed, to the Nanking government, for he minimizes the doings of the opposition in and about Canton.

General Chiang sailed from Nanking aboard a Chinese gunboat to lead the forces, leaving Finance Minister T. V. Soong in charge of political affairs during his absence, which General Chiang estimates, will be about two months.

With the countryside under water, the campaign for rooting out the bandit armies, which are well equipped and in good morale, is likely to be a painful and tortuous process as well as expensive, especially since most of the troops have been promised double pay to insure loyalty.

PEACE between the Vatican and Italian Fascism, instead of being within sight, is as far away as ever, according to Pope Pius XI. The Holy Father, addressing 700 members of the congregation for propagation of the faith, declared in so many words that he and Premier Mussolini were at swords points and that it had been impossible even to start talking of agreements. He asserted that the church is being persecuted in Italy worse than in Mexico and Russia, and that 8,000 organizations of the Duce's followers have been given the task of persecuting him. However, he declared his faith in providence and said the bishops in Italy had informed him that there was increasing unrest in the country because of the "intolerable surveillance, odious espionage, secret reports and continuous menaces."

Mussolini in his latest note to the Vatican was rather conciliatory, but the duke was firm in his attitude toward the Catholic Action societies. He left the fundamental issue which has always existed as to the respective rights of the church and state in educational matters exactly as it has always been.

MEXICO'S troubles with the Catholic church have been renewed by the action of the Vera Cruz state government in restricting the number of priests conducting services to one for every 100,000 inhabitants. Priests in Mexico are warning their congregations that another religious conflict is likely. They said priests in Vera Cruz have been harshly treated, and that a few had been killed.

These remarks are believed to have been inspired by a riot at Huatusco, in the state of Vera Cruz, during the burial of Father Felipe Cano, who died from injuries he had sustained in a clash between liberals and Catholics at Chavastia.

Don Jaime de Bourbon

SPAIN is settling down to normality under the republican rule, but the subject of the status of Catalonia is not yet settled. Alexander Lerroux, minister of foreign affairs, went to Barcelona, center of the stormy province, the other day to sound out the intentions of Col. Francisco Macia and his Catalan following who demand rather more than autonomy for Catalonia. It has been considered likely that Lerroux will be the first premier under the new constitution which will be drafted by the constituent cortes.

Restoration of the Spanish monarchy, with himself on the throne, is the ambition of Don Jaime de Bourbon, the Carlist pretender, who is now sixty years old but vigorous and full of schemes. It is reported that Gen. Martinez Anido, his chief military aid, has gathered an army in northern Spain and expects to overthrow the republican regime. But pretenders seldom have any luck in such ventures, and the government at Madrid probably isn't worried by his threat.

FLAMES starting on a wharf at St. John, N. B., swept the waterfront and practically ruined the entire western section of the port. The property damage was believed to exceed $10,000,000, and several lives were lost. The conflagration raged for hours, destroying docks, grain elevators and several steamships. The greatest loss was suffered by the harbor commission, federal property valued at $3,500,000 being burned.

FOR the first time in the history of Ohio a woman is to be elected. At Jefferson, Mrs. Julia Maude Lowther of Ashtabula, twenty-three years old, was sentenced to die in the electric chair at the state penitentiary on October 2 for the murder of Mrs. Clara Smith, her employer and the wife of the man she loved. Smith, twice convicted of complicity in the killing, also is under a death sentence.

FOR the first time in its history Rotary International has elected a European as president. At the annual convention of the organization in Vienna the delegates selected Sydney Woodroffe Pascal of London, England, to succeed President Almon E. Roth of California. Rufus Fisher Chapin of Chicago was re-elected for his eighteenth term as treasurer.

CHILE, through its minister of foreign affairs, has invited the foreign ministers of all the Pan-American nations to attend a conference on the existing financial crisis, to seek methods by which their governments may co-operate to prevent a complete commercial and economic breakdown. The United States is included in the invitation and presumably will be represented by an official observer. The date and place are not set. (© 1931, Western Newspaper Union.)

CURRENT COMMENT (Continued from Page 2) same obligations imposed upon all other American citizens. They could not on "conscientious" grounds refuse to pay taxes because they did not believe in the cause of their country, and if they could reject other obligations of citizenship at such a time they could repudiate that one.

We are told that if one wants to appear "liberal" he must fall in with the idea that defending the nation against its armed enemies is a matter each citizen must decide for himself. Why apply this to military service alone? Why not be "broad" enough to argue that submission to any decision of our government should be a matter purely of personal choice?

Thomas Jefferson was something of a "liberal." He said that "submission to the will of the majority is the vital principle of republics." The majority members of the supreme court would rather be right than play for applause by the noisy and somewhat crowded "liberal" gallery. They have sustained Thomas Jefferson's opinion when applied to the question of the preservation of the very life of the republic.

WHEN you set out to buy tires, don't you really want the most miles and the utmost in safety at the lowest possible price.

That being your objective, which tire should you buy?

If the experience of 20,000,000 motorists means anything, you should certainly buy Goodyears.

But if you try to puzzle through the welter of statistics on thicknesses, weights and diameters you lose the main issue and are as much at sea as ever.

This fact expressed year after year by Goodyear's great leadership is concretely told again in the findings of an impartial investigation made by an unbiased dependable institution that asked 205,000 car owners this simple question:

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By Frank L. Litschert

Those who listened to President Hoover's recent address before the Republican editors of Indiana, must have been impressed, not only by the cordial Hoosier reception accorded the chief executive, but with the especially vigorous applause which greeted every remark of the president devoted to extolling our sound American nationalism. This significant fact ought to impress our internationalist theorists, who frequently, like the frogs in the puddle, make so much noise they fool themselves, but it will not impress them. They are never bound by such materialistic things as facts.

The simple statement by the president that we have so regulated immigration during the depression, in order to save American jobs for American workers, that for the first time in our history more people are leaving our shores than are entering, was greeted with a storm of applause. There was scarcely less enthusiasm over many other enunciations of sound American doctrine. The president's defense of the tariff was warmly received, as was his statement to the effect that the best way for Americans to help restore prosperity to the world was to try to make America prosperous. In this connection President Hoover said:

"But it is not my purpose upon this occasion to discuss the relations of our many economic problems to the problems of other nations. I am not unmindful of our responsibilities or our vital interest in their welfare. The very first service to them must be to place our own house in order; to restore our own domestic prosperity. It is from increases in our reservoir of economic strength that has and must come our contribution to the development and recovery of the world. From our prosperity comes our demand for their goods and raw materials. A prosperous United States is the beginning of a prosperous world."

These declarations of principle are so logical and so obviously true that it would seem that even an internationalist could see them, and come to the realization of the fact that the best way to help the business of the world is to put on his feet Uncle Sam, the world's best customer. But it is too much to hope that these internationalist economic doctors of ours can advocate a remedy so simple. It is unfortunately far more probable that they will continue to advocate saddling the burdens of the world on to American taxpayers by cancelling the allied debts; that they will continue to denounce our protective tariff and seek to make possible the flooding of the American market with cheaply made foreign goods at the expense of American capital and labor and the ultimate expense of Europe itself; that they will continue to agitate—to borrow words from the president's address—"to agitate for the adoption of economic patent medicines from foreign lands."

It is undoubtedly true that if as a part of the nation, all of us, great and small, will do our best toward restoring normal conditions in America, if our business and political leaders will go about restoring confidence in the United States by building for America in America, if they will cease thinking so much about European markets and European promotion, it will not be long until America is once more on the way toward a new period of prosperity and progress. And a restoration of prosperity in America will have its effects all over the world, for Uncle Sam, it is to be remembered, is the world's best customer, and he spends his money freely abroad. It is the very fact that he has little money to spend just now, that is hurting, abroad. It is not our tariffs, nor our debt collections which are responsible for the falling off in the total of our foreign trade, because nearly two-thirds of what we buy abroad comes in duty free.

Much of London's fog is smoke!

Use Gas and keep your city clean

THE famous London fogs are most often nothing but clouds of smoke. And smoke consists of soot, ash, and sulphur compounds.

California cities are eliminating the smoke nuisance by using Gas—the cleanest fuel.

Gas is delivered to you clean and burns clean.

As a result, health-giving rays of sunlight shine down without obstruction. The outside of your home does not need re-painting as often. Soot does not enter your home to cause you to clean house.

If you are proud of your city, help keep it clean by using Gas for cooking, water heating, and house heating.

The local dealers or the P. G. and E. will demonstrate the modern Gas appliances.

WORSE THAN WAR!

What could be worse than war? War with its hardships, its heart aches, its killed and maimed — can anything be more terrible? Yet, there is something that is killing and injuring more people than any war we've ever had, and that something's the AUTO-MOBILE.

This office wants to be one of the many who are doing their bit in an endeavor to reduce automobile accidents, so for the next few weeks we're going to give a few facts and figures that'll be interesting—on which days the most accidents occur—what time of day—nature of injuries—sex of drivers involved—ages of auto drivers involved, etc.

We hope you'll enjoy the articles and profit by them. If you want more data concerning any items just let us know. And until next week, just ponder over these figures: there were 50,150 members of the A. E. F. killed in action and died of wounds during 18 months of World war; there were 50,900 killed in auto accidents in the past 18 months.

Moral: Be protected by proper automobile insurance and secure it through the office of G. E. Garley.

THE ROADS: HERE AND THERE

COAST ROUTE UNDER CONSTRUCTION

The extensive construction which has been under way on the Coast route, U. S. 101, between San Francisco and Los Angeles, is being rapidly completed and new pieces of work opened up, reports the touring department of the National Automobile club.

Following is an outline of the work now under way: One and eight-tenths miles, beginning at the north city limits of Santa Margarita and extending south; four and eight-tenths miles just south of Los Alamos; and 2.8 miles of construction between Las Cruces and Gaviota.

Traffic is being routed over the work and portions will be found quite rough. The 11 miles between the Monterey-San Luis Obispo county line and Paso Robles have been completed and this part of the road is in splendid condition.

Miss Mary Fablinger returned Tuesday from a visit with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Burke, in Turlock. Mrs. Burke and children returned to Campbell with Miss Fablinger to visit here with other relatives.
